Abstracts

Mobile grain cleaning is an agricultural post-processing service that utilizes transportable equipment to clean and sort grain on-site, either on-farm or at storage locations. Its primary purpose is to remove impurities such as stones, dust, mold, insect pests, weed seeds, and other foreign matter from the grain, thereby improving its quality, storage stability, and market value. This service is typically provided by specialized companies using equipment such as vibrating screens, gravity grading tables, stone removers, air separators, and color sorting systems. Mobile cleaning systems offer advantages such as high flexibility and high efficiency (e.g., processing rates of 450 bushels per hour), making them particularly suitable for small and medium-sized farms, cooperatives, or temporary storage locations.
