Abstracts

Murder mystery games (also known as script-based games) are immersive board game activities that combine role-playing, deduction, and social interaction. Participants assume roles defined in the script, reading their own scripts, collecting clues, conversing with other players, concealing secrets or revealing the truth, and working together to advance the plot, ultimately finding the murderer or achieving their character's objective. It's a highly social and experiential form of entertainment, offering a unique entertainment value that allows players to escape from real life and deeply engage with the storyline and emotions. The murder mystery game market is one of the fastest-growing segments of the offline immersive entertainment market in recent years, driven by the strong demand from contemporary young consumers for high-quality social and emotional experiences. Murder mystery games effectively compensate for the shortcomings of traditional entertainment in terms of deep interaction and emotional investment, becoming an important social activity for young people, especially urban white-collar workers and students. Market observers believe that the social attributes of murder mystery games give them high-frequency consumption and high user stickiness, gradually evolving from leisure entertainment into a mainstream lifestyle for urban youth. Currently, the focus of market competition has shifted from simply expanding the number of stores to the incubation of high-quality content IPs, control of distribution channels, and upgrading of experience scenarios. Script quality is key to user experience and repurchase rates, thus the competition for excellent scriptwriters, exclusive IPs, and distribution rights is increasingly fierce. Simultaneously, to provide a stronger sense of immersion, stores are upgrading towards "Lasting Reality" (LARP) and themed scenarios, combining traditional board game experiences with escape rooms and audio-visual effects. The future trend is to leverage IP collaborations (such as with film and literary IPs) and explore digital online-offline hybrid models to further expand profit margins and user base.

The global Murder Mystery Games market size was estimated at USD 234.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 7.00% during the forecast period.
