Abstracts

Native Advertising Platforms are a digital technology and service system that connects advertisers (demand-side) with media/traffic providers (supply-side). Their core function is to enable the creation, delivery, optimization, and performance tracking of native ads through standardized tools, data algorithms, and resource integration. Essentially, they address the issue of "integration of advertising and content context"?enabling ad formats, styles, and interactive logic to closely align with a media platform's native content (such as articles, videos, and news feeds). This reduces user aversion to ads, helps advertisers precisely reach their target audiences, and enables media providers to monetize traffic without disrupting the user experience.
