Abstracts

The 2025 U.S. tariff policies introduce profound uncertainty into the global economic landscape. This report critically examines the implications of recent tariff adjustments and international strategic countermeasures on Natural Chewing Gum competitive dynamics, regional economic interdependencies, and supply chain reconfigurations. Natural chewing gum is a type of chewing gum made from natural ingredients, particularly using natural gum bases rather than synthetic ones. Unlike conventional chewing gum which often contains plastic-based polymers, natural gum is biodegradable, free from artificial additives, and typically more eco- and health-conscious. Modern consumers are increasingly scrutinizing product labels, especially when it comes to what they put in their mouths. Conventional chewing gum often contains synthetic polymers like polyvinyl acetate and artificial sweeteners such as aspartame or sucralose, which have raised health concerns. Natural chewing gums, made from chicle or other plant-based resins and sweetened with xylitol, stevia, or organic cane sugar, appeal to a health-conscious audience. As awareness spreads through blogs, documentaries, and advocacy groups, more people are seeking natural alternatives. A major driver behind the rise of natural chewing gum is its environmental benefit. Traditional gum contains plastic and is non-biodegradable, contributing to urban litter and microplastic pollution. Natural gum brands market their products as zero-waste, biodegradable, and compostable, aligning with global efforts to reduce plastic consumption. Governments and NGOs promoting sustainability are also indirectly boosting the natural gum sector. The rise of clean-label foods, products with simple, recognizable ingredients, is driving manufacturers to reformulate traditional products. Natural chewing gum fits this trend perfectly by offering a short, transparent ingredient list. Additionally, many natural gum products are certified organic, non-GMO, or vegan, which aligns with broader wellness trends in the food and beverage industry. Natural gum often sits in the premium category, targeting consumers who are willing to pay more for ethically produced and healthier products.

The global Natural Chewing Gum market size was estimated at USD 1268.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 6.50% during the forecast period.
