Abstracts

Non-silicone release paper, also referred to as silicone-free release liner, is a specialized type of paper or film substrate treated with alternative release coatings?such as fluoropolymers, polyolefins, or other proprietary chemistries?that provide controlled adhesion and easy separation from pressure-sensitive adhesives (PSAs), labels, tapes, and composite materials without relying on traditional silicone-based coatings. This product category addresses specific industry needs where silicone contamination is a concern, such as in electronics manufacturing, medical device assembly, and certain graphic arts applications, or where environmental regulations, recycling compatibility, or cost considerations make silicone alternatives preferable. The performance of non-silicone release papers is defined by key properties including consistent release force, thermal stability, chemical resistance, and compatibility with various adhesive systems, allowing them to serve as functional substitutes or enhancements in niche segments of the release liner market.

The global Non Silicone Release Paper market size was estimated at USD 2450.0 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 6.50% during the forecast period.
