Abstracts

The 2025 U.S. tariff policies introduce profound uncertainty into the global economic landscape. This report critically examines the implications of recent tariff adjustments and international strategic countermeasures on Non-substrate Adhesive Tape competitive dynamics, regional economic interdependencies, and supply chain reconfigurations. A Non-substrate Adhesive Tape, also known as a transfer adhesive tape or unsupported adhesive film, is a pressure-sensitive adhesive layer coated onto a release liner without any backing material such as film, paper, or fabric. Because it consists of pure adhesive, it provides extremely thin, uniform bonding and is widely used in electronics assembly, automotive components, displays, labels, medical devices, and precision die-cut parts. The industry chain begins upstream with the production of acrylic, silicone, or rubber adhesive polymers; specialty additives; release liners (glassine, PET, PEK, kraft); and coating equipment. Midstream manufacturers such as 3M, Nitto, Lintec, Tesa, and Avery Dennison convert these raw materials through coating, curing, slitting, and lamination processes to produce transfer tapes in rolls or sheets. Downstream, converters and OEMs die-cut the adhesive films into customized shapes for use in smartphones, touch panels, sensors, nameplates, EV battery modules, medical wearables, industrial assembly, and signage bonding. The industry's average gross margin is generally 25-40%, the sector benefits from high-value specialty adhesives, growing demand in electronics and automotive applications, and the ongoing replacement of mechanical fasteners with lightweight adhesive bonding technologies. In 2024, global Non-substrate Adhesive Tape sales volume reached approximately 65 million sqm, with an average global market price of around 8.3 US$ per sqm.

The global Non-substrate Adhesive Tape market size was estimated at USD 540.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 8.10% during the forecast period.
