Abstracts

One-stop art education platforms leverage the internet and information technology to integrate online courses, offline training, artwork creation and exhibition, teacher resources, and educational management systems, providing students with a comprehensive art education service chain, from basic learning to professional development. Their downstream services primarily target K-12 and youth groups (interest development, art, music, dance, and other courses), adult and professional art enthusiasts (painting, photography, music, dance, and performance training), and educational institutions and businesses (arts course collaboration, teacher training, and hosting of art competitions and events). These platforms cover a variety of scenarios, including individual learning, family education, and school-enterprise collaboration. Because these platforms typically combine low-cost, high-reuse online courses with offline training, they enjoy a high overall gross profit margin, typically around 63%.
