Abstracts

Online Veterinarian Service refers to a service model that provides remote veterinary consultation, diagnosis advice and health management to pet owners through Internet technology. It breaks the time and space limitations of traditional offline veterinary treatment, and through audio and video calls, graphic and text information transmission, etc., pet owners can get professional veterinary guidance without taking their pets to the hospital. Video calls, chat platforms, and remote conferencing tools will continue to be optimized to provide more stable and clear communication connections, and enhance the interactive experience between pet owners and veterinarians. AI-assisted diagnosis systems will be further developed and applied, helping veterinarians analyze pet symptoms and data more quickly and accurately, and provide more accurate diagnostic recommendations. The integration of smart pet wearable devices and monitoring instruments with online veterinary services will be closer, enabling real-time uploading and analysis of pet health data, and veterinarians can promptly identify problems and provide recommendations based on these data. In addition to common disease diagnosis and consultation, online veterinary services will cover more aspects, such as pet nutrition consultation, behavioral training guidance, mental health assessment, etc., to provide pets with all-round health management. More customized services will emerge, providing specialized solutions for different types of pets (such as exotic pets, elderly pets, sports pets, etc.) and different scenarios (such as pet travel, pregnancy care, etc.). At the same time, online veterinary services will cooperate more closely with offline pet hospitals, pet shops, etc., forming an online and offline integrated service model, providing pet owners with more convenient one-stop services.

The global Online Veterinarian Service market size was estimated at USD 427.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 8.30% during the forecast period.
