Abstracts

Overseas security services are a comprehensive service specifically designed to provide security for multinational corporations, government agencies, non-governmental organizations, media personnel, and others operating or conducting business overseas. Its services encompass risk assessment, on-site security, escort services, crisis response, electronic surveillance, and information security. These services are typically provided by professional security companies, combining human, technological, and intelligence resources to ensure the safety of personnel and assets in high-risk areas.The upstream of the overseas security service industry chain mainly relies on human resources such as retired military and police personnel and special security personnel, as well as technical modules such as satellite communication, video surveillance, encryption systems, and emergency dispatch platforms. It must meet requirements such as a response time of no more than 30 minutes, an equipment online rate of over 98%, and a communication encryption level reaching the AES-256 standard. Downstream service clients include energy companies, construction companies, government agencies, and media organizations, with user roles including security supervisors, project managers, diplomats, and journalists. Future development trends focus on intelligent security, remote monitoring, and AI risk identification, gradually achieving linkage with enterprise operating systems to drive the evolution of security services towards customization and localization, especially given the continued growth in demand in high-risk areas. Overall gross profit margin remains between 15% and 30%, with high-end customized services potentially exceeding 35%.

The global Overseas Security Services market size was estimated at USD 15200.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 6.10% during the forecast period.
