Abstracts

The 2025 U.S. tariff policies introduce profound uncertainty into the global economic landscape. This report critically examines the implications of recent tariff adjustments and international strategic countermeasures on PEEK Screw-Sleeve Fixation System competitive dynamics, regional economic interdependencies, and supply chain reconfigurations. Polyetheretherketone (PEEK) screw-shelter fixation systems are orthopedic or craniofacial internal fixation devices made of high-performance medical polymer material PEEK. They typically consist of PEEK screws and matching PEEK sheaths (or washers). Leveraging PEEK's elastic modulus, excellent biocompatibility, and lack of metal artifacts, these systems are used in fracture repair and skull reconstruction to reduce stress shielding and facilitate postoperative imaging assessment. The upstream of the industry chain includes PEEK resin suppliers and domestic specialty engineering plastics manufacturers; the midstream consists of R&D and manufacturing companies with Class III medical device qualifications, requiring expertise in injection molding/machining/additive manufacturing, sterilization validation, and clinical registration; the downstream primarily targets craniofacial surgery, neurosurgery, and hand and foot surgery departments in tertiary hospitals, entering clinical applications through distributors or centralized procurement channels. Due to high technological barriers, early-stage domestic substitution, and the predominantly high-value specialty surgeries, the industry's overall gross profit margin can reach 50%~70%. In 2024, the global production of polyetheretherketone (PEEK) nail sheath fixation systems was approximately 316,000 units, with an average global market price of approximately US$980 per unit. The single-line production capacity was 10,000 units per year.

The global PEEK Screw-Sleeve Fixation System market size was estimated at USD 310.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate

(CAGR) of 8.00% during the forecast period.
