Abstracts

Pet lifetime insurance represents a specialized form of health coverage for companion animals, designed to provide financial protection against veterinary expenses throughout the entirety of a pet's life, as long as premiums are continuously paid. Unlike time-limited or condition-specific policies, lifetime insurance typically covers chronic, recurring, or long-term conditions such as allergies, diabetes, or arthritis without imposing annual limits on claims for ongoing treatments, though it may feature per-condition or overall annual caps. This type of insurance is generally renewable each year, with the understanding that, barring non-payment or fraud, the insurer will continue coverage even as the pet ages and develops new conditions, though premiums are likely to increase with the pet's age and claims history. It is distinct from non-lifetime policies that may exclude pre-existing conditions or cease coverage after a claim is made for a particular illness. The product is aimed at pet owners seeking predictable, long-term budgeting for healthcare costs and greater peace of mind, knowing that their pet can receive necessary medical care without the owner facing prohibitive out-of-pocket expenses.

The global Pet Lifetime Insurance market size was estimated at USD 1160.5 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 8.75% during the forecast period.
