Abstracts

Plastic Free Barrier Coating is an environmentally friendly coating material that provides effective barrier properties without the use of plastic. It is typically made from natural or renewable materials such as starch, cellulose, plant gums, and other biodegradable, non-toxic, and harmless substances. This coating can be applied to various packaging materials, including paper, cardboard, fabric, and more, forming a thin barrier layer that effectively prevents the penetration of moisture, oxygen, grease, and other substances. It not only helps reduce plastic pollution and protect the ecological environment but also enhances the sustainability and environmental friendliness of packaging materials. With consumers becoming increasingly aware of environmental issues, Plastic Free Barrier Coating is gaining wider application in the packaging industry and is becoming one of the important trends in the development of future packaging materials.
