Abstracts

Plastic self-adherent wrap, commonly known as cohesive bandage or self-stick wrap, is a lightweight, flexible, and breathable medical and athletic product made from synthetic materials?typically a blend of polyethylene, polyurethane, or latex-free polymers?that adheres only to itself without the need for adhesive tapes, pins, or clips. It is designed to provide compression, support, and protection for injuries, secure dressings, and stabilize joints or muscles during physical activity, making it widely used in healthcare settings, sports medicine, veterinary care, and first-aid applications. Unlike traditional bandages, it does not stick to skin or hair, allowing for painless removal and repositioning, and it is often valued for its water-resistant properties, elasticity, and ease of use in both professional and consumer contexts.

The global Plastic Self Adherent Wrap market size was estimated at USD 320.5 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 4.75% during the forecast period.
