Report Overview

Poultry concentrate refers to a highly processed, nutrient-dense feed additive derived from poultry by-products, such as meat, bones, and offal, which are rendered, dried, and ground into a powder or liquid form. It serves as a cost-effective protein and mineral supplement in animal feed, particularly for livestock, aquaculture, and pet food industries, due to its high digestibility and rich amino acid profile. The product is valued for its ability to enhance growth performance, improve feed efficiency, and reduce dependency on more expensive protein sources like fishmeal or soybean meal. However, its quality and safety depend on rigorous processing standards to eliminate pathogens and ensure consistent nutritional content. Regulatory frameworks, particularly in regions like the EU and North America, mandate strict guidelines on sourcing, processing, and labeling to mitigate risks such as contamination or allergen concerns. The poultry concentrate market is influenced by trends in animal husbandry, sustainability practices, and fluctuations in raw material availability, with growing demand driven by the global expansion of meat production and the need for efficient feed solutions.

The global Poultry Concentrate market size was estimated at USD 1847.7 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 3.85% during the forecast period.
