Abstracts

The 2025 U.S. tariff policies introduce profound uncertainty into the global economic landscape. This report critically examines the implications of recent tariff adjustments and international strategic countermeasures on Prefabricated Sauna Room competitive dynamics, regional economic interdependencies, and supply chain reconfigurations.A Modular Sauna Room is a pre-manufactured sauna facility in which the structure and components are completed in a factory and then shipped directly to the installation site for assembly. The advantage of this Sauna Room is its rapid installation, which greatly shortens the construction period. At the same time, due to its standardized production, cost and quality are also effectively controlled. The annual production of this product is approximately 200,000 units, with an average price of approximately US$2,000 per unit, and a gross profit margin of 30% to 40%.The upstream supply chain for prefabricated saunas primarily includes the supply of raw materials and components, such as high-quality wood (e.g., cedar, hemlock, or spruce), insulation, tempered glass, heaters (electric, infrared, or wood-burning), control panels, lighting systems, and ventilation. This also involves manufacturers of electronic thermostats, sensor systems, and prefabricated structural panels, which form the core of modular sauna assembly.The downstream supply chain encompasses installation, distribution, and end-users, including sauna dealers, spas and wellness centers, hotels, gyms, residential developers, and direct consumers seeking home wellness solutions. After-sales services such as installation, maintenance, customization, and smart control upgrades are also part of the downstream supply chain. Overall, the prefabricated sauna industry connects upstream material suppliers and component manufacturers with downstream retailers, hotel projects, and private wellness users, forming a complete ecosystem centered around health, comfort, and relaxation.As global awareness of health, relaxation, and at-home wellness experiences continues to rise, the market outlook for prefabricated saunas is increasingly positive. Unlike traditional built-in saunas,
