Abstracts

Prestressed hollowcore flooring is a type of precast concrete flooring system designed for high strength, load-bearing capacity, and efficiency in construction. It consists of prestressed concrete slabs with continuous hollow cores running through their length, which reduce weight while maintaining structural integrity. The prestressing process involves tensioning high-strength steel strands within the concrete before it hardens, enhancing its durability, resistance to bending, and ability to span long distances with minimal support. This flooring system is commonly used in commercial, industrial, and residential buildings, as well as parking structures and bridges, due to its quick installation, fire resistance, and energy efficiency. The hollow cores can also accommodate electrical and mechanical systems, making prestressed hollowcore flooring a versatile and cost-effective solution for modern construction projects.

The global Prestressed Hollowcore Flooring market size was estimated at USD 448.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 3.40% during the forecast period.
