Abstracts

Private duty care systems represent a specialized segment of the home healthcare market, providing non-medical, personalized assistance to individuals?primarily seniors, people with disabilities, or those recovering from illness?who require support with activities of daily living (ADLs) such as bathing, dressing, meal preparation, medication reminders, and companionship, delivered either in-home or in assisted living settings through privately paid arrangements rather than government-funded programs. The market is driven by demographic shifts, including an aging population and increasing life expectancy, rising consumer preference for aging in place over institutional care, greater disposable income among families seeking premium customized care options, and technological advancements that enable more efficient scheduling, remote monitoring, and improved caregiver-client matching. Key challenges include high caregiver turnover rates, regulatory variations across regions, affordability barriers for middle-income households, and intensifying competition from both traditional agencies and tech-enabled platforms offering innovative care solutions. Despite these hurdles, the market shows strong growth potential, fueled by continued demand for personalized, high-quality care that promotes independence and enhances quality of life for care recipients.

The global Private Duty Care System market size was estimated at USD 17800.0 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 6.80% during the forecast period.
