Abstracts

"Private Immigration Prison" refers to detention facilities that are privately run and used to hold immigrants who are in various immigration-related situations. These are prisons or detention centers that are managed by private companies rather than by government agencies directly. In many countries, including the United States, there has been a trend of outsourcing the operation of such facilities as part of the immigration enforcement system. Private companies enter into contracts with the government (such as the immigration department or relevant authorities) to provide space and services for detaining individuals who may be awaiting immigration hearings, facing deportation proceedings, or whose immigration status is under review.
