Report Overview

Rotary screening machine is a device used for screening and classifying granular materials. Its main principle is to use rotational motion and screening to separate particles of different sizes. It usually consists of a rotating screen drum, a driving device, a feed port, a discharge port and other components. The granular materials enter the screen cylinder through the feed port. Under the rotation inside the screen cylinder, the particles are affected by centrifugal force and centrifugal force, thereby achieving classification and screening of the particles.
