Abstracts

The 2025 U.S. tariff policies introduce profound uncertainty into the global economic landscape. This report critically examines the implications of recent tariff adjustments and international strategic countermeasures on Signal Type SPD competitive dynamics, regional economic interdependencies, and supply chain reconfigurations.A signal-type SPD, or signal surge protective device, is a protective device specifically designed to protect communication and signal lines from lightning and other transient overvoltages. Signal-type SPDs utilize nonlinear components such as gas discharge tubes, varistors, and Zener diodes to limit excessive voltage on signal lines or divert surge currents to ground, thereby minimizing or eliminating damage to the protected equipment. For example, under normal operating conditions, a signal SPD has minimal impact on the circuit, allowing current to flow normally. However, when an overvoltage occurs in the system, the SPD quickly responds and conducts, creating a low-impedance path that diverts the overvoltage and overcurrent through the SPD to ground, preventing them from damaging the equipment within the system. Once the surge event subsides, the SPD automatically returns to normal operation. Global production of signal-type SPDs reached 74.316 million units in 2024, with an average selling price of $5.89 per unit.

The global Signal Type SPD market size was estimated at USD 438.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 1.40% during the forecast period.
