Abstracts

A skimboard is a type of surfboard designed for the sport of skimboarding, which involves riding on the surface of the water, typically along the shore, where waves are breaking. Unlike a traditional surfboard, skimboards are generally smaller and flatter, making them ideal for gliding on shallow waters. Skimboarding is performed by running toward the water, throwing the skimboard onto the wave, and then jumping onto it to ride the wave for as long as possible before it dissipates. Skimboards are made from a variety of materials, with modern boards often featuring lightweight, durable constructions such as fiberglass, foam, or carbon fiber. There are different types of skimboards for various conditions, such as flatland skimboards for use on calm waters and wave skimboards for riding on breaking waves.

The global Skimboard market size was estimated at USD 246.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 7.10% during the forecast period.
