Abstracts

A solvent-based adhesive, often referred to as a solvent-based adhesive, is a type of adhesive that uses a solvent or liquid substance to create a bond between surfaces. These adhesives typically consist of a polymer dissolved in a solvent. When the adhesive is applied, the solvent evaporates, leaving behind the adhesive material that forms the bond between the surfaces. These adhesives can have strong bonding properties and are used in various applications such as mattress, furniture, woodworking, automotive assembly, and some types of construction. They can bond a wide range of materials, including foam, felt, metals, plastics, and wood. Their effectiveness depends on factors such as the type of solvent used, the surface materials being bonded, and the conditions under which the adhesive is applied and allowed to dry.

The global Solvent Based Adhesive market size was estimated at USD 7390.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 5.80% during the forecast period.
