Abstracts

Sushi Restaurants are dining establishments that specialize in the preparation and service of sushi, a traditional Japanese dish made from vinegared rice combined with various ingredients like raw fish, seafood, vegetables, and sometimes fruits. These restaurants range from high-end, chef-curated venues offering omakase experiences to casual, family-friendly spaces. They often provide a diverse menu of sushi styles, such as nigiri, sashimi, maki rolls, and specialty dishes. Sushi Kiosks are small, often portable setups located in supermarkets, malls, airports, and other high-traffic areas, focusing on grab-and-go sushi. They typically offer pre-packaged sushi for convenience and affordability, targeting busy or on-the-go consumers who prefer quick meals without the sit-down restaurant experience. Both sushi restaurants and kiosks cater to a wide range of preferences, from luxury dining to casual and accessible sushi options.
