Abstracts

The 2025 U.S. tariff policies introduce profound uncertainty into the global economic landscape. This report critically examines the implications of recent tariff adjustments and international strategic countermeasures on Sushi Vinegar competitive dynamics, regional economic interdependencies, and supply chain reconfigurations. In 2024, global sushi vinegar production will reach 371,000 tons, with an average selling price of USD 560 per ton. Sushi vinegar is a type of seasoning vinegar specifically used for preparing sushi rice. Its core base is rice vinegar, which is usually paired with sugar, salt, and kelp extract or mirin to create a mild, sweet and sour taste. Compared with ordinary vinegar (such as white vinegar or fruit vinegar), sushi vinegar has a softer acidity, a clearer light yellow color, and a more delicate texture. Its design purpose is not to steal the flavor, but to set off the balance between sushi ingredients, especially the sweetness of fish and vinegar rice. This type of vinegar emphasizes "refreshing but not irritating" in flavor processing. It is often used to mix sushi rice, and is also found in Japanese bento, cold food, and some Japanese-style condiments. As an indispensable part of the Japanese food system, sushi vinegar has both culinary functions and cultural significance.

The global Sushi Vinegar market size was estimated at USD 208.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 4.30% during the forecast period.
