Report Overview:

A scanning electron microscope (SEM) is a type of electron microscope that produces images of a sample by scanning the surface with a focused beam of electrons. The electrons interact with atoms in the sample, producing various signals that contain information about the surface topography and composition of the sample. The electron beam is scanned in a raster scan pattern, and the position of the beam is combined with the intensity of the detected signal to produce an image. In the most common SEM mode, secondary electrons emitted by atoms excited by the electron beam are detected using a secondary electron detector (Everhart-Thornley detector). The number of secondary electrons that can be detected, and thus the signal intensity, depends, among other things, on specimen topography. SEM can achieve resolution better than 1 nanometre.

This report mainly studies tabletop/benchtop/desktop SEM market. Unlike conventional, large scanning electron microscopes, tabletop SEMs can easily sit on a bench or table in the lab. Tabletop SEMs provide portability with reliable analysis.

The Global Tabletop (Desktop and Benchtop) SEM Market Size was estimated at USD 177.68 million in 2023 and is projected to reach USD 271.17 million by 2029, exhibiting a CAGR of 7.30% during the forecast period.
