Abstracts

Target bonding service refers to the service of firmly bonding the target material (usually the material used in sputtering coating or physical vapor deposition process) to a substrate or supporting structure. This bonding needs to ensure that the target material remains stable and has good conductive properties under high temperature, high pressure and vacuum environment, avoiding any falling off or displacement during the process. The diversification of target materials, including the increasing use of new target materials such as cobalt (Co), ruthenium (Ru), and titanium (Ti), is placing higher demands on the adaptability of bonding processes. This will drive bonding service companies to increase their investment in technology research and development and process optimization. Stricter environmental protection policies are driving target bonding service companies to shift toward green manufacturing and energy-saving processes. By 2024, the proportion of companies in the industry adopting green processes reached 41%, and this proportion is expected to rise to over 65% by 2030, driving the industry towards high-quality, sustainable development.

The global Target Bonding Service market size was estimated at USD 673.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 7.40% during the forecast period.
