Abstracts

Treasure Hunt Games are interactive adventure games that center around the discovery and collection of hidden objects, clues, or treasures through exploration, logic, and problem-solving. These games often combine storytelling with spatial navigation, requiring players to decipher hints, follow maps, and complete challenges to uncover rewards. They can be played in digital formats such as mobile apps, online multiplayer environments, or augmented reality (AR) platforms or as physical experiences in real-world locations using GPS or QR code technologies.

Gross Profit Margin Analysis
The overall gross profit margin of the treasure hunt game industry is relatively high, mainly due to its asset-light, content-driven business model. For digital treasure hunt games (such as mobile or AR versions), core costs are concentrated in game development, art design, and server maintenance, with extremely low marginal replication costs, resulting in a gross profit margin typically reaching 60%–75%. Among these, AR outdoor treasure hunt applications (such as activity-based games in partnership with tourism or shopping malls) require more sophisticated interactive design and positioning system support, leading to a slightly lower gross profit margin of approximately 45%–55%. Online treasure hunt games, which rely on subscription models or in-app purchases for revenue, maintain stable long-term gross profit margins and have considerable profit growth potential due to continuous content updates and strong community engagement. With the maturation of AI-generated content and map engine technologies, the development costs of treasure hunt games are expected to further decrease, and the industry's average gross profit margin is expected to continue to rise.

Key Drivers
The growth of the treasure hunt game market is primarily driven by the demand for immersive entertainment, technological innovation, and multi-scenario commercialization. First, as Generation Z and Alpha users shift their preferences towards interactive and adventure-based experiences, treasure hunt games have gained widespread popularity due to their story-driven and puzzle-solving features.

Second, the integration of AR, GPS positioning, and IoT technologies has provided technical support for real-world treasure hunt models, driving the rise of "virtual-real" outdoor adventure games. Third, corporate marketing and the cultural tourism industry have embedded treasure hunt mechanisms into offline promotions, urban exploration, and themed scenic area activities, forming a new experiential consumption model. Educational and team-building institutions are also using treasure hunt games for training, logical thinking development, and cultural dissemination, expanding their application boundaries. Policy and capital support for game innovation and the cultural and creative industries has further provided a favorable environment for the global expansion of treasure hunt games.

The global Treasure Hunt Game market size was estimated at USD 5922.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 7.30% during the forecast period.
