Abstracts

Urolithins are a class of compounds produced by intestinal microorganisms after metabolizing certain plant components (such as tannic acid and certain polyphenols). They are believed to have a variety of biological activities, including antioxidant, anti-inflammatory and potential anti-cancer properties. Urolithin is divided into two types: Urolithin A and Urolithin B. Urolithin A is a natural product that can be obtained by hydrolyzing tannic acid in plants such as strawberries and pomegranates. In recent years, studies have found that urolithin A has multiple functions, including promoting muscle cell growth and metabolism, reducing oxidative stress, and relieving inflammation, and has been shown to be beneficial for improving human health, especially for the health of the elderly and delaying aging and related muscle degeneration and neurodegenerative diseases. At present, this beneficial natural product is under further research and development. Through refined manufacturing and product positioning, the preparation of urolithin A can help consumers provide better health protection.

The global Urolithin market size was estimated at USD 247.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 8.30% during the forecast period.
