Report Overview

Valuables insurance, also known as scheduled personal property coverage, is a specialized form of insurance designed to protect high-value items?such as jewelry, fine art, collectibles, electronics, and luxury accessories?that may not be fully covered under standard homeowners or renters insurance policies. This type of insurance provides additional protection against risks like theft, loss, accidental damage, or mysterious disappearance, often with broader coverage and fewer exclusions than standard policies. Valuables insurance typically requires appraisals or proof of value for the insured items, and premiums are calculated based on the item's worth, risk factors, and the policyholder's location. Unlike blanket coverage under home insurance, valuables insurance allows for itemized protection with agreed-upon or replacement value payouts, ensuring high-ticket possessions are adequately safeguarded. The market for this insurance is driven by affluent consumers, collectors, and individuals with significant investments in personal assets, as well as growing awareness of coverage gaps in standard policies. Insurers often offer customizable plans, including worldwide coverage, to cater to the mobility of high-net-worth clients. The rise in luxury spending, coupled with increasing incidents of theft and natural disasters, has further fueled demand for this niche insurance segment.

The global Valuables Insurance market size was estimated at USD 3003.3 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 7.50% during the forecast period.
