Abstracts

Video advertising software refers to a category of digital tools and platforms designed to facilitate the creation, management, distribution, and optimization of video advertisements across various channels, including social media, websites, connected TV (CTV), and programmatic exchanges; these solutions typically offer features such as ad targeting, performance analytics, budget allocation, and integration with demand-side platforms (DSPs) or ad servers, enabling advertisers and agencies to efficiently scale video campaigns, personalize content for specific audiences, and measure return on ad spend (ROAS) through metrics like viewability, completion rates, and engagement. The market is characterized by rapid technological advancements, including the adoption of artificial intelligence for creative optimization and audience segmentation, as well as a shift toward automation to reduce manual intervention and improve targeting precision. Key drivers include the growing consumption of video content globally, the expansion of over-the-top (OTT) and CTV advertising, and increased advertiser demand for measurable, high-impact formats; however, challenges such as ad fraud, privacy regulations like GDPR and CCPA, and rising costs of premium inventory may constrain growth. Competition is intense among established players like Google, Facebook, and Amazon, as well as specialized providers such as Innovid, Viant, and TubeMogul (now part of Adobe), with innovation focusing on cross-channel attribution, interactive ad formats, and leveraging first-party data in a cookieless environment.

The global Video Advertising Software market size was estimated at USD 14500.0 million in 2024 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 12.50% during the forecast period.
