To address the cumbersome traditional background removal process in video production, unnatural edge processing, and limitations on creative expression, video background removers have emerged. With breakthroughs in artificial intelligence technology, the video editing technology field has undergone significant transformation since the early 21st century, as these tools have matured. Today, video background removers have evolved into various forms, including cloud-based processing, local software, and real-time computing, and are widely used in film and television production, online education, commercial live streaming, and personal content creation, becoming intelligent tools that significantly improve video editing efficiency, lower technical barriers, and enhance visual expressiveness. Dynamically, the video background remover market is developing towards platformization and integration, deeply integrating with video editing software (such as Adobe After Effects and DaVinci Resolve), supporting hybrid cloud and local deployment modes.
