Abstracts

Vitamin Subscription Box is a periodic health product delivery service centered on personalized nutrition management. This model collects users' lifestyle habits, dietary structure, health goals, and biomarker data through online health assessment questionnaires. Algorithms or a team of nutritionists then generate customized nutrition plans, delivering monthly or quarterly packages containing a combination of vitamins, minerals, and dietary supplements. Each package contains an individually packaged daily dose packet, an ingredient information card, and a health guidance manual. The formula is dynamically adjusted based on user feedback. Its core value lies in addressing the pain points of traditional supplement purchases, such as inaccurate dosages, limited product variety, and low adherence. Through a closed-loop service system of "assessment-customization-delivery-tracking," it transforms fragmented nutritional supplementation into a systematic health management plan, becoming an innovative solution for modern consumers' daily health prevention and management.

The global Vitamin Subscription Box market size was estimated at USD 460.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 5.80% during the forecast period.
