Abstracts

The 2025 U.S. tariff policies introduce profound uncertainty into the global economic landscape. This report critically examines the implications of recent tariff adjustments and international strategic countermeasures on Welding and Brazing Materials competitive dynamics, regional economic interdependencies, and supply chain reconfigurations.Welding and brazing materials refer to consumable materials used to join two or more metal parts by applying heat, with or without additional pressure. Welding materials are used in fusion welding processes, where the base metals are melted and fused together. Common welding materials include welding wires, electrodes, and rods made of steel, aluminum, or other alloys. Brazing materials, on the other hand, are used in brazing processes where the filler metal melts at a lower temperature than the base metals and flows into the joint by capillary action without melting the base materials. Typical brazing materials include silver-based, copper-based, and aluminum-based filler metals. These materials play a critical role in industrial manufacturing, construction, automotive, aerospace, and electronics by providing strong, durable metal joints.According to the report, Saudi Arabia revenue for Welding and Brazing Consumables is expected to grow between 2020 and 2025. Of the major players of Welding and Brazing Consumables, Colfax maintained its first place in the ranking in 2019. Colfax accounted for 22.76% of the Saudi Arabia Welding and Brazing Consumables revenue market share in 2019. Other players accounted for 18.66% and 6.72% including Lincoln Electri and Voestalpine B?hler Welding. On the basis of product type, Welding Consumables segment is projected to account for the largest revenue market share during the forecast period; this segment accounted for 71.68% share in 2019. Brazing Consumables held the rest of market with 28.32% in 2019. In the applications, Automotive segment was estimated to account for the highest revenue market share of 23.81% in 2019. Construction segment accounted for the second highest revenue market share with 16.07% in 2019.
