Abstracts

Whipped topping concentrate refers to a shelf-stable, typically powdered or liquid base product designed to be reconstituted with water or milk and then aerated to produce a light, fluffy whipped topping resembling whipped cream in texture and appearance, but often formulated for extended stability, cost efficiency, or specific dietary requirements such as non-dairy, low-fat, or extended shelf life applications. It is distinct from ready-to-use whipped toppings or aerosol creams, as it requires an additional whipping step by the end user, making it popular in food service, bakery, and manufacturing settings where volume, consistency, and storage efficiency are prioritized over convenience.
