Abstracts

The 2025 U.S. tariff policies introduce profound uncertainty into the global economic landscape. This report critically examines the implications of recent tariff adjustments and international strategic countermeasures on White Tomato Extract competitive dynamics, regional economic interdependencies, and supply chain reconfigurations. By 2024, the global production capacity of white tomato extract has reached 862 tons. In 2024, global white tomato extract production reached approximately 675 tons, with an average global market price of around US$ 50 per kilogram. By 2024, white tomato extract's gross profit margin will reach 5.3%. White tomato extract is a natural ingredient extracted from a special variety of white tomatoes. Unlike regular red tomatoes, which are rich in lycopene, its core value lies in its high content of colorless carotenoids, particularly phytoene and phytoene. These ingredients are believed to have powerful antioxidant properties, protect the skin from UV damage, inhibit melanin production to improve pigmentation (such as melasma), and have anti-aging effects. Therefore, they are widely used in dietary supplements, functional foods, and cosmetics. The white tomato extract industry chain begins with the upstream cultivation and raw material supply of white tomatoes, where farmers or agricultural enterprises cultivate specific white tomato varieties. The midstream stage is the production and processing of the extract, where specialized manufacturers transform the raw tomatoes into standardized extract products through processes such as cleaning, extraction, concentration, and drying (such as producing white tomato powder). The downstream stage targets the end-use market, including brand owners in the dietary supplement, cosmetics, pharmaceutical and health product, food and beverage industries. These companies use the extract as a core ingredient in final products, which are then delivered to consumers through various online and offline sales channels.

The global White Tomato Extract market size was estimated at USD 336.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 2.30% during the forecast period.
