Report Overview

The hair alcohol test service is a forensic and diagnostic tool used to detect and quantify alcohol consumption over an extended period, typically up to 90 days or more, by analyzing ethanol metabolites such as ethyl glucuronide (EtG) and fatty acid ethyl esters (FAEE) in hair samples. Unlike traditional blood or urine tests, which only provide short-term detection windows, hair testing offers a longer historical record, making it valuable for legal, workplace, and medical applications, including probation monitoring, child custody cases, employment screening, and addiction treatment assessments. The method is highly sensitive and can distinguish between chronic heavy drinking and moderate or occasional use, though factors like hair treatments, cosmetic products, and environmental exposure may occasionally influence results. The service is gaining traction due to its non-invasive nature, reliability, and ability to provide a comprehensive timeline of alcohol consumption patterns.
