Report Overview

An Intermediate Contract Development and Manufacturing Organization (CDMO) is a specialized service provider that operates within the pharmaceutical and biotechnology industries. It offers a range of services, including the development and manufacturing of active pharmaceutical ingredients (APIs) and intermediates, which are the precursors to APIs. These intermediates are critical components in the synthesis of final drug products. The CDMO's role is to bridge the gap between the initial stages of drug discovery and the final stages of commercial production. They often provide expertise in process development, scale-up, and cGMP (current Good Manufacturing Practice) manufacturing, ensuring that the intermediates and APIs meet the required quality standards for use in clinical trials and, ultimately, for patient use.
