Abstracts

To address the communication inefficiencies and hindered international dissemination caused by imprecise language and inconsistent writing styles in academic research and business documents, language editing services have emerged. Since the late 20th century, with the acceleration of globalization and the increasing frequency of international academic exchanges, language editing services have gradually developed into a professional and systematic support industry. Today, these services cover multiple areas, including academic paper polishing, business document revision, and technical document optimization. They integrate functions such as subject-matter adaptation, format standardization, and cross-cultural expression conversion, and are widely used in research submissions, corporate expansion overseas, degree applications, and international publications. They significantly improve text quality, enhance information delivery, and promote professional communication across language boundaries. The language editing service industry is undergoing a transformation from "scale expansion" to "quality upgrading." Companies need to build competitiveness through technological integration (such as AI large-scale models like Seamless M4T), standard building (such as ISO 17100 certification), and vertical specialization (such as medical/legal professional services). In the future, with the deepening of globalization and the iteration of digital technologies, the industry will develop towards "high precision, intelligence, and multi-scenario" to meet the core needs of cross-language communication, cultural dissemination, and technological cooperation.

The global Language Editing Service market size was estimated at USD 790.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 6.90% during the forecast period.
