Report Overview

Raspberry wine is an alcoholic beverage made by fermenting raspberries, often blended with other fruits or sweeteners to balance its tartness. It falls under the broader category of fruit wines, which are distinct from grape wines due to their use of non-grape fruits. The production process typically involves crushing raspberries, fermenting the juice with yeast, and aging the liquid to develop flavor complexity. Raspberry wine can range from dry to sweet, with variations in alcohol content depending on fermentation techniques.
