Report Overview

Resorbable Collagen Tape is a medical device primarily used in surgical procedures, particularly for tissue repair and reinforcement. Made from collagen, a naturally occurring protein in the human body, this tape is designed to be biocompatible and gradually absorbed by the body over time. It is often used in reconstructive, plastic, and general surgeries to provide support and structure to the repaired tissue, promoting healing and reducing the risk of complications such as dehiscence. The tape's resorption properties mean that it integrates with the body's natural healing process, eliminating the need for a secondary procedure to remove it, thus offering both patient comfort and convenience.
