Report Overview

Saltwater pool systems, also known as salt chlorination systems, are advanced pool filtration technologies designed to maintain clean, clear, and chemically balanced water through the use of salt. These systems work by dissolving salt into the pool water and using an electrolytic cell to generate chlorine through a process called electrolysis. The chlorine produced is then released into the pool water to sanitize and kill bacteria, algae, and other contaminants, providing a more natural and environmentally friendly alternative to traditional chlorine-based pool chemicals. Saltwater pool systems are known for their low maintenance, cost-effectiveness, and the soft, silky feel of the water they produce, making them a popular choice for residential and commercial pools alike.
