Abstracts

The 2025 U.S. tariff policies introduce profound uncertainty into the global economic landscape. This report critically examines the implications of recent tariff adjustments and international strategic countermeasures on Seasoned Chicken competitive dynamics, regional economic interdependencies, and supply chain reconfigurations. Chicken bouillon is a compound seasoning designed to provide dishes with a rich, savory meat flavor and complex "umami" taste. Its core ingredient is a flavor enhancer primarily composed of monosodium glutamate (MSG), combined with chicken or chicken bone extracts, nucleotides (such as I+G), salt, sugar, starch, or dextrin, and other auxiliary ingredients. Chicken bouillon has a richer flavor profile and tastes closer to natural meat broth than pure MSG. It is a widely used basic seasoning in modern home cooking and the catering industry, used to enhance the umami flavor of various dishes, soups, and noodles. 2024 sales volume: 1.18 billion units, average price: $2.10, single-line capacity: 60 million units, gross margin: 30%. The chicken bouillon market is a highly mature and stable basic condiment market. Its core drivers are the catering industry's demand for standardized flavors and households' demand for quick flavor enhancement. In the catering supply chain, chicken bouillon provides a stable complex umami flavor, helping chefs quickly achieve flavor consistency, and is a key element for central kitchens and chain restaurants to maintain standardized taste. At the household consumer end, chicken bouillon, as a convenient "one-stop" flavor enhancer, remains the mainstream choice to replace traditional chicken broth, ensuring its large and continuous sales base in the condiment field. Despite its large size, the chicken bouillon market faces structural challenges from clean labeling and health-conscious trends. Changing consumer perceptions of food additives, especially MSG, are driving the market towards "No Added MSG," "Low Sodium," and "Naturally Extracted" products. Market competition has shifted its focus to natural umami agents such as seafood extracts, yeast extracts, and mushroom extracts. In the future, chicken bouillon manufacturers must upgrade their formulas, replacing some MSG and salt with healthier natural ingredients to alleviate consumer health concerns and maintain and expand their market share.

The global Seasoned Chicken market size was estimated at USD 2478.0 million in 2025 and is projected to grow at a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 8.00% during the forecast period.
