Report Overview

A Shop Floor Coordinate Measuring Machine (CMM) is a type of coordinate measuring machine that is designed to operate on the shop floor of a manufacturing facility, as opposed to a dedicated metrology lab. Unlike traditional CMMs, which are often located in climate-controlled rooms, Shop Floor CMMs incorporate features that make them well-suited for use in harsh, industrial environments. These machines are typically built with a robust chassis and vibration-dampening components that can withstand the rigors of a busy factory floor. Shop Floor CMMs often feature integrated environmental monitoring systems that can detect changes in temperature or humidity, enabling the machine to compensate for these factors in real time. Additionally, shop floor CMMs may have advanced filtering and shielding capabilities that protect them from the electromagnetic interference that is common in industrial environments. Many Shop Floor CMMs are equipped with advanced software that allows operators to program automated measurements and perform quick, accurate part inspections. This capability can enable manufacturers to run 100% inspection of components in high-volume environments, providing an extra layer of quality control that can help prevent defects from reaching the end customer.
