Report Overview

Unbleached Kraft Wood Pulp is a type of papermaking material derived from wood fibers, specifically from the Kraft pulping process. This process involves the use of chemicals, such as sodium hydroxide and sodium sulfide, to break down the lignin that binds the cellulose fibers in wood, resulting in a pulp that is strong and durable. The term "unbleached" indicates that the pulp has not undergone any bleaching process, which means it retains its natural brown color. This type of pulp is often used in the production of various paper and packaging products, such as cardboard, paper bags, and wrapping paper, due to its strength and eco-friendly nature. Unbleached Kraft Wood Pulp is also appreciated for its recyclability and biodegradability, making it a sustainable choice for many applications.
