Report Overview

Underarm antiperspirants are personal care products designed to reduce or prevent sweating and body odor by temporarily blocking sweat glands, typically containing active ingredients like aluminum salts (e.g., aluminum chloride or aluminum zirconium). These products come in various forms, including sprays, roll-ons, sticks, and gels, catering to diverse consumer preferences for application and texture. Unlike deodorants, which primarily mask odor with fragrances and antimicrobial agents, antiperspirants address the root cause of sweat, making them a staple in daily hygiene routines. The market is driven by consumer demand for long-lasting protection, skin-friendly formulations, and added benefits such as moisturizing or natural ingredients, reflecting broader trends in health-conscious and eco-friendly personal care. Innovation in product efficacy, sustainability (e.g., plastic-free packaging), and inclusivity (e.g., gender-neutral or sensitive skin options) further shape the competitive landscape.
