Waterless toothpaste is a concentrated oral hygiene product designed to clean teeth without the need for water, making it particularly suitable for travel, outdoor activities, or situations where water access is limited. Unlike traditional toothpaste, it often comes in solid forms such as tablets, powders, or gels that can be chewed or applied directly to the toothbrush, relying on saliva for activation. The product emphasizes portability, sustainability (often packaged in eco-friendly materials), and convenience, appealing to eco-conscious consumers and frequent travelers. Some formulations also exclude artificial preservatives, sulfates, or fluoride, catering to consumers seeking natural or minimalist oral care alternatives.
