Report Overview

White Duck Feathers are a type of natural, lightweight, and soft filling material derived from the downy undercoat of domesticated ducks. These feathers are highly valued for their insulating properties, making them ideal for use in bedding, pillows, and clothing. They are known for their ability to trap air, which helps retain heat and provide a comfortable sleeping environment. White Duck Feathers are also characterized by their hypoallergenic qualities, making them suitable for individuals with allergies or sensitivities. Their white color is a result of the natural pigmentation of the duck's feathers, which can also be bleached to achieve a uniform appearance.
