Report Overview

Yellow Bud Tea, also known as Huang Ya, is a premium grade of yellow tea originating from the Anhui and Sichuan provinces in China. This delicate and rare tea is characterized by its tight, needle-like shape and golden-yellow color, which is a result of the unique processing method that involves a controlled fermentation period. The leaves are plucked from the tea plant Camellia sinensis, specifically the buds and the first two leaves, which are then withered, heated, rolled, and allowed to oxidize slightly before being dried. The controlled oxidation imparts a distinct, subtle flavor profile that is less astringent than green tea but more so than fully fermented black tea. Yellow Bud Tea is known for its refreshing, sweet taste with hints of chestnut and a smooth, buttery mouthfeel. It is often appreciated for its health benefits, which include antioxidant properties and potential digestive support. The tea's golden hue and unique processing make it a sought-after choice among tea connoisseurs and is typically consumed without any additives to fully appreciate its natural qualities.
