BMI View: Strong government support for PPPs reinforces our positive outlook for Egypt's construction industry in the short-to-medium term. Rising foreign investor interest in this market and a growing and increasingly diversified project pipeline bode well for infrastructure development in Egypt.

Foreign direct investment (FDI) as well as development assistance will continue to be fundamental for Egypt's infrastructure development. As political stability and policy clarity, as well as pent-up demand, entice investors back into the country, our Country Risk team expects a significant upswing in FDI inflows into Egypt over the coming quarters.
