BMI View: Our outlook for the renewables industry in Kenya is bullish. The industry is already relatively well developed, the country boasts a strong project pipeline across the geothermal, solar and wind segments and the government remains committed to diversifying its power mix away from diesel and hydropower.

Latest Updates And Structural Trends

Construction at the Lake Turkana wind power plant in May marks a major milestone for the flagship wind project. We have factored in the completion of the project into our 2018 forecasts - a delay of one year - in light of the numerous risks facing the construction phase of the project.
